

Thursday 15 October

09:50 Quiz the finalists: Part Two

Session preparation

Features categories in the ABSW annual awards are always inundated with entries, so how do you write one that will stand out from the rest?

In our second panel, the 2019 winners, and two of the shortlisted 2020 features entrants, will talk about what made their articles special – from dreaming up the idea to nailing the right interviews; and from crafting the narrative to working synergistically with the editor.

Please read these masterpieces beforehand (see attachments at the bottom of the page) then come with your questions to: 2019 winner Hal Hodson of The Economist; 2019 winner Alex Riley, whose freelance piece appeared in Mosaic; WIRED UK's Amit Katwala; and freelancer Giorgia Guglielmi, whose article appeared in Nature.

The discussion will be moderated by former Mosaic features editor Mun Keat Looi, now international features editor of the BMJ.

Please set aside half an hour to read the articles beforehand: they are all terrific reads and you will follow and contribute to the discussion best that way.

Giorgia GUGLIELMI

Facing Up to Injustice in Genome Science

Hal HODSON

The network within, the network without (see attached PDF)

Alok JHA

Gravitational astronomy proves its maturity (see attached PDF)

Alex RILEY

How a wooden bench in Zimbabwe is starting a revolution in mental health