1	Short	4	14	Health and Social Care professionals are already stretched to their limits due to financial constraints. Additional funding will need to be provided to increase capacity in order for 'named workers' to be made available in supporting transition.
2	Short	5	30	Current service models between adult and child services are rigidly aligned with age. This will be a major challenge to current service models and culture.
3	Short	6	3	Transition planning and review in most areas are led by schools and education services. There is often little notice to health and social care professionals, making it difficult to attend such meetings.
4	Short	8	25	A national model of a standard personal folder would be helpful.
5	Short	9	24	This could be part of the 'Local Offer'
6	Short	10	13	Is it realistic to expect GPs to be involved in transition process?
7	Short	12	3	Good idea but again unrealistic in implementation. If this is a serious proposal, more detailed 'job description' for these roles will need to be developed, with clear accountability arrangements, and will be part of CQC inspection items.
8	Short	13	1	Who will be responsible for carrying out this gap analysis? Will need to specify.

9	Short	14	1	Please give some examples of joint clinics. Also this will probably mean running clinics across different health providers, and there will be management challenges e.g. activities, income, administrative support etc.
