

Supporting International Newly Arrived Children and their Families

Training for Health & Social Care Staff—Attachment & Safeguarding across Cultures

This one day workshop will examine the assessment of child development, attachment and parenting practices using a combination of theory and reflexive exercises to develop skills.

Aims of the day are to:

- * Critically explore cultural assumptions and values underpinning parenting and child development in western and non-western societies
- * Introduce delegates to the assessment of attachment and caregiving practices across cultures
- * Consider good practice in the assessment of risk and safeguarding issues in work with Black and minority ethnic families

This workshop is suitable for psychologists, mental health practitioners, social workers, and other health and social care professionals working with children and families. Students and trainees are also very welcome.
