Welcome to the YAYAs

Dr Mohammed Ali OBE, Founder and CEO of QED Foundation

Like so many people, we at QED are hugely relieved and thrilled to be able to present the second Yorkshire Asian Young Achievers (YAYAs) awards in person as a live event.

When we conceived the YAYAs, to mark the 30th anniversary of our charity last year, we never once imagined that it would be anything other than a spectacular celebration of the vast wealth of young talent among those of South Asian heritage throughout our beautiful and glorious county.

It certainly achieved its main goal – but in a very different way to that envisaged, as a live broadcast, streamed on the internet, instead of a gala awards presentation dinner in front of an audience of hundreds of people. So not only was it our first awards event but also our first event staged remotely, utilising the sort of technology which so many of us have been forced to learn and adapt to through the Covid-19 pandemic.

It was fun and exciting but no substitute for a live event and we are absolutely delighted to be able to stage the second YAYAs awards this year in a room full of people!

The YAYAs is the first scheme of its kind set up to recognise the efforts of young people aged 16-30, of South Asian heritage born or living and working in Yorkshire. Its special focus is on those socially-mobile young achievers who have overcome deprivation and disadvantage, or have broken through traditional barriers to progress. The awards aim to promote social mobility among young South Asians, identify role models to help inspire others from the relevant communities and encourage young South Asians to seek out and take up further and higher education opportunities.

Our first year was hugely successful with scores of entries from right across the county and some amazing winners chosen from a stunning list of shortlisted candidates. We believe the awards will go from strength to strength and the courage, determination, skill and commitment displayed in this year's shortlist is surely a testament to that and should be a source of immense pride for all of us.

None of this, of course, would be possible without the fantastic and generous support of our array of sponsors and I would like to pay tribute to all those who have stepped forward to help us organise and stage the YAYAs. In doing so, I must make special mention of our headline partners, York St John University, who have been right behind the YAYAs from the very start and whose commitment to their success has been inspirational.

We hope that you, in turn, will be inspired by the talent on display and the remarkable stories of those whose achievements offer so much hope for all our futures.

Mohammed Ali

About QED

Transforming lives since 1990

QED Foundation is like a chemical catalyst, changing the lives of hundreds of thousands of people for the better while remaining unaltered itself. We have stayed true to our northern roots and our delivery of education, training, employment-related and health services at neighbourhood level continues to inform our campaigning and influencing work.

But we have always moved with the times and adapted to new challenges. In the early days our main focus was on helping people from disadvantaged communities struggling to find work against a background of high local unemployment levels, low educational attainment and the collapse of traditional industries. In more recent times, the Covid-19 pandemic and the tragic killing of George Floyd have presented very different scenarios for us to respond to.

Thirty-one years on we have three new priorities. Firstly, underemployment is becoming as much of an issue as unemployment. Ethnic minorities are still concentrated in low-paid jobs with little responsibility and few opportunities for progress, regardless of their skills and qualifications. We encourage and support employers to ensure that their workforces are representative of local demographics at all levels of seniority.

Secondly, we are focusing our efforts on improving the prospects of the most disadvantaged ethnic minority groups. Each faces very different challenges and these cannot be overcome by one-size-fits-all solutions.

And finally we are helping to build bridges between diaspora communities in Britain and their countries of origin so that we can encourage trade and collaboration between the UK and our international partners. Times have changed but our commitment to helping create a fairer and more equal society remains the same.

When QED began its work in 1990, there were 3.5 million people from ethnic minority backgrounds in the UK. Today there are more than eight million and they make up 14% of the population.

The last three decades have seen these communities make great strides forward in all areas of public life. In 1990 all but four of our MPs were white. By 2017 a record 52 were from an ethnic minority background. Sadiq Khan was elected to one of the country's most high-profile political roles as Mayor of London in 2016. Sajid Javid has held two of the four great Offices of State, becoming Home Secretary in 2018 and Chancellor of the Exchequer in 2019.

Mishal Hussain and Faisal Islam break the news; Maggie Aderin-Pocock and Jim Al-Khalili are among our most well-known scientists; and Turner Prize winner Chris Ofili and director Steve McQueen have blazed a trail in the arts.

But we should not let these successes blind us to the fact that all too many still face an uphill struggle to survive. Some communities - including Indians, Chinese and African Asians - have made ▶

About QED

Opening opportunities to all

◀ great social and economic progress over the last 30 years. But others have been left behind. People from Pakistani, Bangladeshi and certain mixed-race backgrounds are still more likely to be out of work or trapped in low-paid occupations and live in housing that is not fit for purpose.

Poor health outcomes mean that they are more likely to suffer many years of chronic illness and die young. And their children under-achieve at school so they start adult life at a disadvantage.

As society becomes increasingly unequal, QED Foundation's mission to break that vicious circle and help everyone fulfil his or her potential becomes more important than ever. At QED, no-one is a number. We take our time to get to know each of our service users and design a customised support programme that meets his or her individual needs. For those who are long-term unemployed, we offer much more than help with looking for vacancies, writing CVs, filling in application forms and learning and practising interview techniques.

We specialise in giving people farthest from the labour market the self-confidence to make those difficult first steps, match trainees to suitable work placements and provide ongoing support to the companies that take them on. Inability to communicate effectively is the most difficult barrier preventing successful integration into British life for recent migrants and isolated members of settled communities alike.

Our English courses help people from ethnic minority backgrounds to improve their speaking, listening, reading and writing skills - even if they are not yet ready for college courses. As well as learning the language, our students are supported to use public services and become more involved in wider society. Formal education can be inaccessible and intimidating but we provide small classes led by professional teachers in a relaxed and friendly environment.

These are backed up by activities where students can practise their English in indoor and outdoor settings. Additional support can be provided by volunteers, who help learners by providing further opportunities for speaking and listening in everyday situations. Our digital inclusion training also gives people the skills they need to play an active part in British society.

These guide complete beginners through the basics of using a computer, browsing the internet and sending emails. After completing one of our courses, learners have the confidence to look for work, manage their money and access public services and health information online.

People from some ethnic minority backgrounds are more likely to be on low, irregular or insecure incomes than the general population. We run money management workshops to help them budget wisely and avoid falling into debt. In the long run, these courses can help families break out of the poverty trap and give their children a better start in life.

Last year's overall winner

YOUNG ACHIEVER OF THE YEAR 2020 - Mohammed Ali Hussain

A university student who went into the care system at just 18 months' old, and is now studying to become a physics professor, became the first Yorkshire Asian Young Achiever of the Year last year.

Mohammed Ali Hussein, aged 20, was one of 13 winners at the YAYAs awards, which were announced in a special virtual event webcast after the planned awards dinner was cancelled due to the Covid-19 restrictions.

Mohammed, who was born in Bradford but is living and studying in Hull, said: "I want to dedicate this award to my first foster family, my auntie, my uncle and my brothers who gave me that initial push into education.

"They really helped me by taking me to the library and just getting me interested in the things I am. I definitely wouldn't be here today without them."

He said it was recognition of his hard work so far and he advised others who wanted to move forward to "continue writing their stories and working hard to be where you want to be."

Mohammed Ali Hussain's story is so remarkable and spans so many areas of achievement that the judges decided to place him in a category of his own for the Young Achiever of the Year Award. They had originally intended to choose an overall Young Achiever from the winners of the 12 award categories but unanimously decided that Mohammed, aged 20, stood out from all other entrants in this year's shortlist.

Of Pakistani heritage, Mohammed overcame a very difficult childhood and chaotic home life to become a mentor, support and champion for the voices of children and young people in care.

He entered care himself at just 18 months old because of alcohol and domestic abuse issues in his family; he was moved to a number of foster placements, each of which broke down, until he was eventually placed in one family at age 10 for nearly a year.

He was then moved to a children's home where he suffered from bullying - both there and at school - and struggled to find the peace and space to study before discovering the solace he needed in libraries, where he used to go to learn on his own.

At 16, he began to live more independently and moved into a semi-independent household and, by the time he was 17, he was living entirely independently while studying for his exams. He achieved 11 GCSEs and three A-Levels and he is now studying Physics with Astro-Physics at the University of Hull and plans to go on to study for a PhD. He hopes to stay in academia and go on to become a university professor.

Mohammed, who lives in Hull, has been chair of Bradford Children in Care Council (CICC), representing young people in care and care leavers. As chair, he has spearheaded many changes for looked-after and leaving care children from the installation of wi-fi in Bradford's residential homes to campaigns around young people's rights.

He has delivered training to all new foster carers in Bradford - training that has now been incorporated into the instruction all new foster carers complete before they enter the Bradford fostering service. He has also delivered training to students and social workers. He has challenged on behalf of Bradford's care population and is now a member of the young people's panel interviewing prospective employees, from directors to residential workers.

Dr Mohammed Ali OBE, founder and chief executive of Bradford-based QED Foundation, who launched the awards in conjunction with York St John University to mark the charity's 30th anniversary, said: "Mohammed is a truly remarkable young man who has overcome a very difficult background to become a shining star and someone who, we believe, will go on to do great things in the future."

She is keen to raise the profile of Muslim hijab-wearing women in fitness – she proudly wears her hijab to the gym – and has posted videos attracting vast audiences across different social media platforms.

AWARD SPONSOR

Back in 1979 Farzand Begum, mother of the Mumtaz family, opened a tiny shop just four square metres in size, on Great Horton Road, in Bradford, with an emphasis on good, wholesome, homemade food. It quickly became famous for its authentic Kashmiri Cuisine.

Little did she know then that from these humble beginnings was to grow a multi-national food operation that spans the globe, with prestigious restaurants in Bradford and Leeds. All of this was achieved by keeping faithful to our mother's original recipes and continuing to use the finest ingredients in all our produce.

Farzand Begum would have been proud to know that the seeds she planted all those years ago have grown to not only produce quality food but to also help others less fortunate than ourselves through the many charities we support worldwide.

Our mission is simple. We wish to delight our customers with the rare taste of authentic Indian cuisine and to excite them with rich, aromatic sauces and authentic flavours. With family values at heart, we still use our grandmother's original recipes to make honest Indian food. We create our hand-cooked ready meals using the finest quality fresh ingredients, using no additives or preservatives.

We are so passionate about our food, in fact, that our goal is to become a household brand that is synonymous with restaurant quality food, at home. This desire and commitment keeps us striving for perfection and in the creation of our range of premium chilled ready meals, we have found the perfect outlet for our passion for food. We hope that this passion can be seen, felt and, more importantly, tasted in everything we do at Mumtaz.

Mumtaz Restaurant stands proudly at the top of Bradford's Great Horton Road, where the original Mumtaz shop was founded in 1979. The modern interior, coupled with a cosy environment, provides the perfect setting to enjoy truly authentic Kashmiri Cuisine, whether it's a relaxing family meal or a catch up with friends. The venue is well known for amazing food, great service and buzzing atmosphere. With a seating capacity of 500, the venue is a perfect location for large weddings, corporate events or special occasions.

The 24-year-old, from Wakefield, is of mixed white and Pakistani background. Passionate about racial inequalities in healthcare, she was involved in organising events for BAME and LGBTQ+ history months. She is studying for a Masters in healthcare.

AWARD SPONSOR

The University of York is delighted to be supporting the Yorkshire Asian Young Achievers Award for Achievement in Health, Mental Health and Healthcare. The University of York is the home of enquiring minds, inspiring teachers, pioneering researchers and committed professional services staff, all of whom are determined to make the world a better place. Our founding values of excellence, equality and opportunity for all, anchored by the highest academic standards, are as true today as they were when the University of York opened its doors.

UNIVERSITY

Our Equality, Diversity and Inclusion Strategy speaks to the core of our values and we are committed to creating a working, learning, social and living environment that will enable all our staff and students to achieve their potential, whilst they celebrate diverse cultures, knowledge and identities and are encouraged to make a positive contribution to the city, region and beyond.

We are committed to providing exceptional learning experiences that stay with our students for the rest of their lives, enabling them to flourish within and beyond their studies. Our well-established widening participation programmes provide an opportunity for learners from across the country, and particularly those from Yorkshire, to gain an insight into university study. We are continuously growing as a university community and offer a range of career development opportunities in research, teaching, professional and support services as well as inclusive campus facilities, services and networks to support staff and students from diverse backgrounds.

We have a range of activities that engage with the wider community in which we live, work and learn, and pride ourselves on forging local partnerships within York and local counties, working particularly closely with schools, colleges and communities. Our new campaign, York Unlimited, highlights our mission to improve lives, drawing together our global community of staff, students, alumni and the people and businesses of our city. The campaign supports the delivery of projects that enable brilliant minds to break barriers, overcome limitations and think differently to solve the challenges of the world today. With six priority areas, it is important that these include ‘enabling every student to shine’ and ‘transforming mental health’.

AQIB KHAN

Bradford actor Aqib Khan is known for playing Sajid in 'West is West,' aged 16, along with the late Om Puri. The 28-year-old has appeared in many TV programmes and is currently in the BBC One comedy 'Ladhood.' Aqib is of Pakistani background and from a traditional Pathaan family. He considers himself a role model for Bradford people and his ambition is to appear in Hollywood and Bollywood films.

SHAZIA BIBI

Shazia, aged 26, is an actor, writer, producer, evaluator and project manager from Bradford and has a Pakistani background. A creative investigator at Bradford Produce Hub, she has produced successful programmes for freelancers and creatives in the arts industry. She hopes to increase the city's art demographic and scene and is a mental health and equal provision advocate.

MYRA HUSSAIN

Through her determination in developing her singing skills and confidence, Myra has been a role model to other young Asian women in the performing arts. The 18-year-old, who is South Asian and lives in Bradford, was a founder member of Unity Girls, a drama group supported by The Girlington Centre. She continues to inspire young Asian women and encourage her generation to talk about their feelings.

AWARD SPONSOR

At the National Science and Media Museum, in the heart of Bradford, we explore the science and culture of image and sound technologies and their impact on our lives

SCIENCE+ MEDIA MUSEUM

Our internationally significant collections in the fields of photography, film, television and sound are the foundation for our talented teams to create galleries, exhibitions and events that fuel the imagination and inspire the next generation of scientists, engineers and artistic creators. And Pictureville, our cinema which includes the region's biggest IMAX screen, allows us to showcase the magic of moving images from around the world in Bradford, the first UNESCO City of Film.

A visit to the museum will delight and surprise: Wonderlab is our fully interactive gallery which explores the scientific principles of light and sound, and recent temporary exhibitions have included In Pursuit of Perfection: The Yorkshire Photographic Union Competition and Above the Noise: 15 Stories from Bradford, both taking a closer look at fascinating aspects of our city and region through photography and multimedia.

This year we are exploring sound in two exhibitions, Sonic: Adventures in Audio and Boom: Experiments in Sound – the exhibitions are part of our Sound Season, exploring how sound fills our world, and how we can experiment and play with it.

The exhibitions, which are open until December, include fascinating interactive displays, objects and stories from the likes of the BBC's Radiophonic Workshop (which created the Doctor Who soundtrack among many others).

We are delighted to be supporting the YAYA award for Achievement in Arts and Creative Industries for two key reasons. Firstly, we want to ensure our region's creativity and culture is reflected and celebrated in the work we do – whether it is through exhibitions, making connections between our collection and people's personal stories, or in this case sponsoring an award celebrating excellence. Secondly, we are committed to inspiring, supporting and encouraging young people with opportunities in the cultural sector. It is essential for the future of our creative industries that we nurture the thriving talent that exists in Yorkshire.

ACHIEVEMENT IN THE PRIVATE SECTOR

JAGJIT SINGH CHAGGAR

Jagjit is a 26-year-old British Indian living in Keighley. He suffers from ankylosing spondylitis, a disease affecting his back and leg movement. Despite the physical pain, he hasn't let it hold him back. His achievements include being the youngest Indian Society President at the University of Birmingham. He plays cricket, rugby and hockey and is currently production manager at a cereal factory in Poole, Dorset.

ANEESA EHSAN

One of the founding partners of Proctor & Hobbs solicitors, 28-year-old Aneesa Ehsan is also a visiting lecturer and member of the Law Advisory Board for Bradford University. Aneesa, who lives in Bradford and is of Pakistani background, ventured into law at a young age. During her career she has developed and maintained a culture of inclusion and is an advocate for encouraging women to achieve their ambitions.

ABDUL JABBAAR AHMED

Leaving school at 16, Abdul went to work at BKP Solicitors. He completed his NVQ levels 1, 2 and 3 in Business Administration and recently began a seven year apprenticeship in legal practice to become a qualified solicitor. The 21-year-old, who lives in Bradford, comes from a Pakistani background. He is keen to give back to his community through volunteering at a local boxing club and after-school club.

AWARD SPONSOR

We're thrilled to be supporting the YAYA Awards and celebrating our fantastic young people once again.

Heartfelt congratulations from all of us at MyLahore to nominees, winners and all involved - we're all about developing people and championing positive impact in our communities. Feel free to read on to find out a little more about us...

Founded in 2002, MyLahore is an iconic and award-winning restaurant and catering group. We love welcoming guests at our restaurants in Bradford, Leeds, Manchester, Birmingham and London Barking.

We also do wedding, corporate and charity events/catering at the MyLahore Marquee Manchester, and at many other venues across the UK. Plus, there's an exciting online chilled range of Celebration Cakes and Dessert Boxes, at-home Sharing Boxes, and a ready-to-grill Uncooked Range, all available for in-store collection and a limited selection for UK mainland delivery.

MyLahore is rooted in Yorkshire in a world of small kitchens yet huge hearts, where families tuck into everything from samosas to shepherd's pie, and karahis to cornflake tarts. It's a very British Asian story that just had to be shared!

We love to bring people together around great food and vibrant, fulfilling experiences.

We're inspired to build on the pioneering migrant spirit of those that journeyed before us, and pass on something positive to those that come after us.

Our menu is famously diverse, with something for everyone, and we just love offering up tastes of adventure as well as culinary strolls down memory lane. So in a hectic world, why not slow down and savour the moment with us, as we bring you flavours from a very colourful journey...

ACHIEVEMENT IN SCHOOL or COLLEGE

the shortlist

HUSEN ALI

Arriving in the UK in 2017, Husen Ali was 16 and spoke little English.

Now 20, Husen, who is from a Bangladeshi background, has made significant progress with his studies.

Arriving in Keighley three years ago, he enrolled on an ESOL course at Keighley College and went on to complete five GCSEs. He is studying for his A-levels at Leeds City College and has been accepted to study law.

RUHEE DAWOOD

STEM mentor Ruhee was born and grew up in Kenya. The 23-year-old moved to York after being awarded a Sharifah Sofia Albukhary Scholarship to study Chemistry at the University of York. After completing her undergraduate degree, Ruhee was awarded a Whinfield Medal. She secured a full scholarship to fund her PhD and wants to be the next researcher to make a ground-breaking discovery in organic chemistry.

MALAIKA KHAN

Malaika Khan moved from Spain aged 14. English was a third language for her. The 17-year-old, who lives in Keighley, comes from a Pakistani background. She came to live with extended family to improve her English and study law. Despite her initial struggles with the language, Malaika passed her GCSEs and is pursuing her A-levels. Her commitment to her studies is inspiring. She helps young pupils with literacy and numeracy.

AWARD SPONSOR

We're proud to be sponsoring the Achievement in School or College category at the YAYA awards. They give much deserved recognition to the many incredible young people who attend schools or college and who are making outstanding efforts every day throughout the year. They are an inspiration to all of us, and these awards go some way to showing our appreciation for these young people and just how much they are valued by their school, college and communities.

Bradford is a vibrant, dynamic and diverse district. We have a rich history and a bright future: over half a million people live here and we have roots all over the world. We are a big economy with globally successful businesses. We are the youngest city in the UK, we have a growing population, and we're ambitious for our young people. We want all our young people to be able to add to our skilled and enterprising workforce, sharing in inclusive growth and creating prosperity and opportunity for all.

So the YAYA awards, with their special focus on promoting socially-mobile young achievers who have overcome deprivation and disadvantage, or have broken through traditional barriers to progress, is something that we really support.

This is a challenging time for education in our district. Our children and young people have had to endure huge disruption due to COVID but have shown tremendous determination and resilience to continue their studies throughout the pandemic. We are determined to do all we can to support them through it.

Our Opportunity Area status continues to provide funding that enables schools to boost the life chances of pupils from disadvantaged backgrounds. One of its projects to boost literacy, 'Glasses for Classes' has won praise from government and been rolled out to other areas of the country.

We want to congratulate everyone who has supported the awards and those who have been nominated. We all need to acknowledge the fantastic work that many young people do, not just those who have been nominated, on their journey to achievement. They are all winners, and the YAYA Awards help us celebrate this.

Leeds
CITY COUNCIL

Our ambition is for Leeds to be the best city in the UK: compassionate and caring with a strong economy; which tackles poverty and reduces inequalities; working towards being a net zero carbon city by 2030.

We want Leeds to be a city that is distinctive, sustainable, ambitious, fun and creative for all, with a council that its residents can be proud of as the best council in the country.

ACHIEVEMENT IN THE PUBLIC SECTOR

AAMIR KHAN

Despite encouragement from his family to go to university, Aamir Khan secured a role as a senior officer in management at HMRC.

The 28-year-old, who lives in Bradford, comes from a Pakistani background. He left school at 18 with basic BTEC level qualifications in IT and Business studies and at 19 joined HMRC as an administration assistant. During his decade with HMRC he has become a higher level manager.

YUSUF HUSSAIN

Award-winning Yusuf Hussain was Student of the Year 2020 at Leeds City College and Police Cadet of the Year in 2016. The 19-year-old's varied roles include community drugs awareness campaign worker. Yusuf, who lives in Bradford and is of Pakistani background, is working towards a role within the police. He volunteers his time for the benefit of others and his home city, and is an advocate of discipline and hard work.

HUMA MALIK

Huma Malik is a long-standing volunteer for NHS Bradford People's Board. The 27-year-old, of Pakistani background, lives in Bradford and is employed by NHS Leeds CCG as an Engagement Officer, helping to improve health outcomes in communities. She runs her own social enterprise, Music Talkz, providing workshops for young people and tackling mental health issues through creativity. She is a trained WRAP facilitator.

AWARD SPONSOR

With a population of over 790,000, Leeds is the third biggest city in the UK and it has a rich history of being a place of refuge to a diverse population with communities from 170 nationalities and many different faiths from around the world who contribute to the cultural, civic and economic success of our vibrant and modern city.

Our vision is for Leeds to be the best city in the UK: one that is compassionate and caring with a strong economy, which tackles poverty and reduces inequalities.

We want Leeds to be a city that is distinctive, sustainable, ambitious, fun and creative for all, with a council that its residents can be proud of: the best council in the country!

Leeds City Council recognises the important and positive work that individuals, community groups and organisations do to make their local communities a better place and we celebrate these achievements annually, through our Compassionate City and Child Friendly Leeds award events.

We value the strength of our relationships with our Muslim friends in the city and the support we provide to the ambitions of the Leeds Young Muslim Forum of next-generation leaders in the city.

The Yorkshire Young Asian Achievers Awards complements our work and as the regional capital for Yorkshire and Humber we are delighted to sponsor the event.

ACHIEVEMENT IN THE NOT-FOR-PROFIT SECTOR

the shortlist

TAYABAH PARVEEN

Qualified sports coach Tayabah helped set up Bradford Bears wheelchair basketball team, providing sporting activities for disabled people. She supports disabled people in hikes around the UK through 'Take a Hike.' The 30-year-old, who lives in Bradford and is of Pakistani background, set up the Bradford Jaguars female cricket team in 2020 at Bradford University. She is also a member of Bradford Park Avenue ladies' cricket club.

SAIF DIN

Saif Din opened a community boxing and fitness gym in a socially and economically deprived area of Rotherham. The 27-year-old was keen to encourage young boys off the streets and into a safe space to train. Muslim girls also attend. Saif, who lives in Rotherham and is from a Pakistani background, is keen to promote positive male Muslim role models. He runs sessions to suit the needs of the community.

ZAIN UL ABDIN

During the pandemic, Zain, aged 23, who has been the Sports and Wellbeing Officer at the University of Bradford (UBU) charity, organised food deliveries to self-isolating students, including one from England cricketer Adil Rashid. He lives in Bradford and is of Pakistani background. He helped improve the mental health and wellbeing of students and is an ambassador for promoting safety on streets near campus.

AWARD SPONSOR

Over 155 years ago our founder, Thomas Barnardo, promised to support children in need of help – regardless of their background or circumstances.

Today we continue to keep that promise. In 2020-21 we supported over 382,000 children, young people, parents and carers, around one in four (25%) are from a Black, Asian or other ethnic minority background, across Barnardo's 800 services. We change children's lives and the system around them, for the better.

That's why we're proud to be supporting the Yorkshire Asian Young Achievers Awards tonight. These awards recognise the efforts of young people who have broken through barriers and gone on to thrive.

Barnardo's runs services across Yorkshire, supporting hundreds of children and young people in the region who are experiencing challenges at home and at school. This includes families who are caring for a child with autism and have Urdu as their first language.

In Bradford alone, we deliver 11 different services, providing one-to-one support, advice and help to young people at risk of exploitation, families living in poverty, and children struggling with mental health problems and special educational needs and disabilities. We're also there for young people across Yorkshire more broadly, teaching key life skills and supporting them to access training, education and employment – and helping to reduce offending and anti-social behaviour.

Across the UK, children continue to face complex challenges, including a growing crisis in children's mental health, rising numbers going into the care system, and an increase in serious youth violence. One hundred and fifty-five years since we began, our work is more vital than ever.

Our ambitious 10-year Corporate Strategy is focused on achieving better outcomes for more children, through stronger families, safer childhoods and positive futures. With the dedication and expertise of our 17,000 people and our partners in government, business and philanthropy, we will continue to bring care, love and hope to the children who need us most.

ACHIEVEMENT AS A YOUNG ENTREPRENEUR

OMAR BAHADUR

After graduating from the University of Bradford in Mechanical Engineering, founder and CEO of Faraday Drinks Omar financed his vision to produce a naturally-flavoured water beverage with no artificial ingredients through various jobs. The 26-year-old, who lives in Bradford and is of Pakistani background, began production in 2020 and the drink, named after British inventor Michael Faraday, sold out its initial batch.

SABREEN AHSAN

In 2018 Sabreen launched a digital marketing agency, PIYA Media, which works with creative entrepreneurs from BAME backgrounds to redress the inequalities many face in terms of resources, funding, mentorship and networking. The 29-year-old, who lives in Keighley and is of Bangladeshi background, is the youngest trustee for Young Enterprise, a charity providing skills and financial training for youngsters.

HASEEB ARSLAN

Haseeb studied at air force school in Pakistan. He wanted to be a pilot until his mother became ill and he returned to the UK. Thankfully his mother recovered. The 27-year-old, who lives in Heckmondwike and is of Pakistani background, undertook an IT course at Kirklees College and a degree at Huddersfield University. He runs the charity Plate4humanity in Pakistan and a property business among others.

AWARD SPONSOR

PAS Foundation gives people the tools they need to transform their own lives.

We work among Pakistan's poorest communities, helping young men and women to set out on rewarding careers, become financially independent and support their families.

We provide vocational training so that they can learn the skills they need to earn a living at home or abroad. We also help with finding jobs or setting up businesses and social enterprises.

Six out of ten people in Pakistan live below the poverty line but the population is youthful – and that means there is hope for the future.

The average cost of a nationally or internationally accredited course in industrial sectors such as construction, hair and beauty or information technology is just £200.

Through fundraising in the UK we are able to provide scholarships and small business support grants so that young men and women can escape a vicious cycle of poverty for good. And by encouraging self-reliance and independence we are also helping to build sustainable and resilient communities.

Yet all too many aspiring young businesspeople across Yorkshire also have many barriers to overcome before they can fulfil their dreams.

We know that Asian graduates are more likely to be paid less or under-employed than their white counterparts. But we are also impressed by their entrepreneurial spirit – the very same can-do attitude that is shown by the students on our training programmes in Pakistan.

We are proud to sponsor the YAYA Young Entrepreneur award. It proves that when talent is combined with hard work, determination and ambition, anything is possible.

We hope that the stories behind the young people shortlisted for this year's awards encourage others from across the region to believe that – no matter how daunting the first steps into business might seem - they also have what it takes to succeed.

ACHIEVEMENT IN OVERCOMING LIFE OBSTACLES

SONIA HUNJAN

Sonia, who has the degenerative eye condition retinitis pigmentosa, graduated from Leeds Beckett University with a BA in English Literature. In 2018, the 23-year-old, who lives in Leeds, undertook part-time studies for an MA in Global Literature and Culture at the University of York for which she received a distinction. Sonia, who is of Indian background, started a blog 'The Blind Reader' to help raise awareness.

MUNEEB AKHTAR

Since being diagnosed with Crohn's disease in 2016, Muneeb, aged 24, has worked with numerous charities to raise awareness about hidden disabilities including Crohn's and colitis. Muneeb, who lives in Bradford and is of Pakistani background, was part of the national campaign 'Not Every Disability is Visual.' He works mainly in the Asian community speaking about the issues he has faced and supporting others.

SUFIYAN MOHAMMED

Despite his many disabilities and impairments, for the last four years Sufiyan has been involved in a number of inclusive projects for disabled people through the University of Bradford Union of Students. The 23-year-old, who lives in Bradford and is of Pakistani background, embarked on adapted hikes including Snowdon and Ben Nevis, raised over £2,000 for the NHS charity during lockdown and achieved distinctions at Bradford College.

AWARD SPONSOR

Students at the University of Bradford benefit from – and are part of – teaching and research that harnesses technology for the good of society.

They learn from academic and industry experts who are shaping the future of their sectors in world-class facilities – we've invested millions of pounds in high-tech learning environments, such as our motion-capture studio and our new School of Management facilities.

Our curriculum is designed with input from industry experts and partners, which means our students develop skills that are highly valued by employers – along with plenty of hands-on practical experience. Many of our courses have professional, statutory or regulatory body accreditation or approval, giving graduates the best possible start to their careers.

During their time with us our students can become the very best version of themselves. The University is a place where students can expand their minds and make lifelong friends; where they can grow, learn, experience. Where they can belong, and we support them every step of the way.

The Times and Sunday Times have named the University of Bradford as the UK's University of the Year for Social Inclusion 2020. This prestigious national award recognises Bradford's outstanding impact on social inclusion that ensures all students, irrespective of their backgrounds, are supported to achieve their potential and go on to achieve success.

With over 50 years of academic excellence behind us as a university, we continue to grow our international reputation, course provision and research impact.

We have always been pioneers in developing new course subjects and modes of teaching, reflecting and anticipating the needs of employers, our students, and of society as a whole; our course provision and research strategy is designed in response to the changing business, social, scientific and environmental landscape.

Today our associations and networks span the globe; from strong links to leading local and national employers, to academic partner institutions, to the World Technology Universities Network, we are an outward-facing institution committed to the creation, dissemination, and application of knowledge for the benefit of global society. We have an alumni community of more than 140,000 graduates in over 175 countries worldwide.
