Growing Up and Growing

Harnessing the Power of Comparative Research

Sponsored by

#SLLS2022

Welcome from Dario Spini, SLLS President

It is my great pleasure to welcome you all to this 2022 Annual Meeting of the Society for Longitudinal and Life Course Studies in Cleveland, USA, and to recover a “normal” scientific life with this meeting mostly in-person and with a return to past levels of participation.

After many meetings in Europe, this is the first time the SLLS goes to the USA. We look forward to it, and I would like to express my gratitude to Jessica Kelley and Dale Dannefer to make this possible, thanks to their commitment in organizing this conference. It has been a pleasure to work with you!

This meeting will have the usual sessions: talks, symposia, keynotes, posters. Three keynotes were invited. The first by Elizabeth Cooksey (The Ohio State University) is titled Children no more: Life trajectories of the children of the NLSY79. The second, by Morten Wahrendorf (University of Düsseldorf): Life course influences on healthy aging: Findings based on Global Aging Data, and the third by Jinkook Lee (University of Southern California): A global perspective: Reframing aging experiences. We will also try a new format with the interactive panel session organized by Rick Settersten and colleagues, titled Studying social change in human lives: Reflections and conversation, with Glen Elder, Dale Dannefer, Jeylan Mortimer, and moderated by Jessica Kelley. In this session we will have the opportunity to exchange about how life course research can document and analyze these times of collective uncertainties (COVID, Climate change, war in Ukraine etc.). What is the role of life course research(ers) and of the SLLS in this threatening environment? For sure, comparative longitudinal data may be one answer to address these issues. Excellent colleagues will provide insights to answer these important questions, but what are yours? Please come and participate in this new type of session and don't hesitate to tell us what you think of this initiative.

We also need your participation in the Annual General Meeting of the Society. The societal changes we are experiencing may also ask that the SLLS adapt to climate change. Organizing an international conference every year may not be sustainable in terms of carbon balance sheet. At the same time the conference is the major financial source of the society. How do we address these facts? We will also introduce the new members of the SLLS Executive Committee and the new President of the society: Susan Morton (University of Auckland). Thank-you Susan for accepting to take on this new challenge!

This is my last conference as President of the SLLS and it is a bit frustrating that I will be the president that has “lost” the largest amount of money since the birth of the SLLS! The Executive Committee have worked very hard, and in particular Cat Westlake and Tony Robertson, to limit the negative effects of the COVID crisis on our finances. I really hope this period is behind us. I would also like to express my gratitude to all of them for their commitment, which enables us to meet again and discuss what we are mad about: rock'n'roll...oh no sorry: life course research!

Welcome

It's our great pleasure to welcome you to the 11th Annual Meeting of the Society for Longitudinal and Lifecourse Studies (SLLS) at Case Western Reserve University. It's an honor to host the first SLLS meeting in North America!

This year's theme, Growing Up and Growing Older Across Societies: Harnessing the Power of Comparative Research, was selected to celebrate the major investments in large-scale cohort studies that have the potential to be – and now in many cases are – harmonized with cohort studies in other societies or previous cohorts of the same society. As a result, comparative life course research has emerged as a gold standard for understanding how macrosocial and structural forces shape the aging experience, and its outcomes including health, work, finances and social networks. We look forward to our prestigious plenary speakers and symposia demonstrating the power and potential of this work.

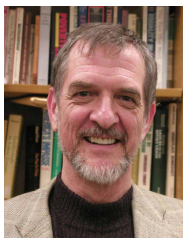

The roots of Case Western Reserve University are steeped in research and today CWRU is widely recognized as one of the leading research universities in the United States. Among the many accomplishments in our history is the famed Michelson-Morley experiment in 1887, which was the first to test the velocity of light. The Nobel-winning experiment presaged Einstein's theory of relativity.

Today, we have over 5,700 undergraduate students and more than 6,000 graduate students working in degree programs across the university. CWRU has a long history of research and leadership in the areas of age, life course and human development. Within the Department of Sociology, for example, our faculty are recognized as leaders in topics ranging from stress and coping to cumulative dis/advantage to cutting edge life course methods. Sociology faculty edit two important journals (Journal of Gerontology Social Sciences and Journal of Elder Policy), as well as recent editions of the Annual Review of Gerontology and Geriatrics.

This long-standing area of CWRU's strength is evident in other departments and in the interdisciplinary University Center on Aging and Health based in the Frances Payne Bolton School of Nursing and the Mandel School of Applied Social Sciences (both ranked in the top 10 nationally). This work is bolstered by the university's close ties to two major health care institutions, the Cleveland Clinic and University Hospitals

Case Western Reserve sits in the heart of Cleveland's University Circle and many of the surrounding institutions are affiliated with the university, including Severance Hall, the home of the world-famous Cleveland Orchestra. Other entertainment and research affiliated associations within easy walking distance of the SLLS conference are the Cleveland Museum of Art, Cleveland Botanical Gardens, Crawford Auto Museum, Dittrick Medical History Center and the Museum of Natural History. We hope you have the opportunity to visit some of them along with the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame on the nearby Cleveland lakefront.

We're pleased and honored to welcome you and wish you a productive conference experience and an enjoyable time in Cleveland.

INSTITUTE FOR SOCIAL RESEARCH • SURVEY RESEARCH CENTER
PANEL STUDY OF INCOME DYNAMICS

Panel Study of Income Dynamics (PSID) is the world's longest running national household panel survey. Begun in 1968, PSID has collected 42 waves of data from the same families and their descendants for over 50 years. More than 11,000 families participate in the PSID, including periodic immigrant refresher samples. Since PSID follows the descendants of sample members, it is a unique source for studying the intergenerational transmission of health and economic wellbeing. Content includes income, employment, wealth, expenditures, education, health, fertility, marriage, philanthropy, and numerous other topics.

Child Development Supplement (CDS) is a research component of the PSID. CDS provides researchers with extensive data on children and their extended families to study the dynamic process of early human and social capital formation. The original CDS included up to two children per household who were 0 to 12 years old in 1997, and followed those children over three waves, ending in 2007-08. CDS-2014 and CDS-2019 include all eligible PSID children born since 1997 and are publicly available. CDS-2021 was collected in from Fall 2021 to Spring 2022.

Transition into Adulthood Supplement (TAS), started in 2005 and collected biennially, captures data on the developmental pathways and outcomes of children who participated in CDS-1997 as they transition into young adulthood. TAS fills a gap between information collected in CDS and information on adulthood collected from PSID panel members once they have assumed economic independence. As of 2017, all young adults age 18-28 are eligible for TAS, regardless of their CDS participation. TAS-2019 is publicly available and TAS-2021 is currently available as an early release file.

Visit our website to learn more about PSID at #SLLS2022 and find time to meet our team in the exhibit hall.
